

I WOULD WALK

 1000 MILES

A charity walk in aid of the Blue Dragon Children's Foundation, Vietnam

Once upon a time I had a job, a car, a house and a fairly decent pension scheme. Then I dumped the lot and went travelling. Armed with a rucksack, more clothes than I needed (since scattered around various countries) I set off for Australasia.

In Hanoi, I fell in with the BDCF – a charity for children run by a man from Sydney and staffed by volunteers both Vietnamese and international. They made me feel useful, and the work they do is phenomenal.

I eventually decided to head back to Europe and wanted to do something silly on the way home. Something grand. Just arriving home would be boring... so came up with this idea. Walking 1000 miles (1600km) across Europe. Picking a charity to do it for wasn't difficult.

Help me help them!

Please help! All money raised will be very well spent! Keep up with my progress on the web page listed at the bottom. Donations can also be made through it, to myself in cash if you see me on the walk or directly via Blue Dragon's site. Alternatively, some places displaying this poster will collect money on my behalf and forward it through as a lump sum – please see the boxout below.

If this box is blank, please go to the web page to donate. Otherwise, please hand your money to the person/office detailed who will then forward it to myself:

For updates, please see: www.IWouldWalk1000Miles.me.uk

Contact me via the web page if you would like copies of this poster for your own use, or if you or your company could help in any way with the walk. Footwear, drinks, accommodation...!

For details of the charity, see: www.bdcf.org